
FRANKLIN COUNTY

A Shared Community Rooted in Cooperation

Franklin County, Indiana is a place defined by strong community ties, rich history, and a deep sense of local pride. While Southeastern Indiana REMC serves a portion of Franklin County, we are proud to be part of a broader cooperative effort—alongside neighboring utilities—to support the residents, businesses, and institutions that call this area home.

Brookville, the county seat, is known for its historic charm and role as a community gathering place. Its downtown shops, local restaurants, and seasonal events reflect the welcoming spirit that can be found throughout the county. Just outside town, Brookville Lake offers year-round recreation, drawing visitors for boating, fishing, hiking, and camping and contributing to the area’s quality of life.

Franklin County’s agricultural heritage remains an important part of its identity. Family farms, many passed down through generations, continue to shape the landscape and local economy. At the same time, the county is home to a mix of manufacturing, healthcare, education, and small businesses—demonstrating a balance of tradition and progress.

Community involvement is central to life in Franklin County. Local schools, service organizations, churches, and nonprofits work together to support neighbors and strengthen connections. Festivals, parades, and community celebrations bring people together and highlight the cooperative spirit that runs deep across the county.

Southeastern Indiana REMC is proud to serve members in our portion of Franklin County by providing reliable electric service and supporting efforts that strengthen the local community. Working alongside other electric cooperatives serving the county, we share a common goal: delivering dependable service while investing in the long-term well-being of the communities we serve.

From its scenic landscapes to its close-knit towns, Franklin County reflects the values at the heart of cooperative service. It’s a reminder that even when service territories are shared, commitment to community remains a common bond.

